The Williams & Pissh company of New York give the following summary of con-ditions in the market for cotton seed

The conditions prevailing in the cotton oli market are rather unusual, especially as regards this market where reduced on its still selling at a parity of less than the price which is freely bid for prime crude. This state of affairs is due to two causes one being the unter lack of export demand (which is this market's principal outlet) and the other, the pressure put on the market here by one of the principal companies.
